

Outlook Better on This Side of the Pond

Venturesome Investors Increase Your Domestic Stock Fund Allocation

In the July issue Brexit was the hot topic, and we talked about the 3 rings of impact to consider. First was the effect within the boundaries of the UK. Second, how would Brexit affect Britain's European trading partners? Finally, what would be the effect on the rest of the world (the US, Japan, and China, among others). As we enter August, the third ring has felt minimal effects so far.

That's not to say everything is perfectly rosy with those three major global economies. Monetary and fiscal tools continue to be utilized in an effort to achieve each country's growth and inflation goals. In the US, recent employment, real estate and household purchase reports have been good enough to keep our market near its all-time high and stir a little dissension at the Fed. And according to former Goldman Sachs partner Gavyn Davies' recent "nowcast" work (which we respect), he sees a pickup in both the advanced and emerging economies.

Brexit—6 weeks later

Where are we six weeks after the June 23 vote? Some developments are easy to see. Britain has a new Prime Minister, Theresa May, and a new cabinet packed with loyalists and "Leave" supporters. There is uncertainty in Scotland and Ireland, as their voters said strongly that they wanted to "stay." However, most importantly, we are still waiting for meaningful post-Brexit economic numbers to give us a clue as to how much damage might occur. We believe the worst impact is going to be UK-localized, but other than a significant decline in the value of the pound—which was predictable—we don't have much solid evidence yet. One thing we do know: The negative global impact that many predicted hasn't developed.

World Markets: 2016 Returns

Index	July	YTD 7/29
Brazil – Ibovespa	11.2%	32.2%
China – Shanghai Comp	1.7	-15.8
Europe – Euro STOXX 50	3.5	-9.2
India – S&P BSE SENSEX	3.9	7.4
Japan – Nikkei 225	6.4	-12.9
Mexico – Bolsa IPC	1.5	8.6
U.S. – S&P 500	3.6	6.3

Looking at world financial markets, one could say there has been a global relief rally since the Brexit vote. After the initial one- or two-day shock—which ranged from only -1.3% in China to a sizable -11.2% for the Euro STOXX 50—markets have calmed down and for the most part are ahead of where they were before the vote. Only the Euro STOXX 50 was off for the 6/23 – 7/29 period (-1.6%); the Nikkei 225, Shanghai Composite and S&P 500 were all up between 2% and 3%; and even the FTSE 100, made up of the 100 largest cap stocks on the London Exchange, was up 4.9% since the "Leave" vote.

The Markit PMI, a measure of British manufacturing in July, was just released August 1st and was disappointing. But, undoubtedly, manufacturing will like the weaker currency going forward. As we go to press we need more data before drawing any long-term conclusions on the UK economy.

US economy

The headline number last week (Second Quarter GDP growth) was surely surprising, coming in well below the 2-2.5% expectations. The 1.2% number, coupled with the revised 1Q of 0.8%, results in the weakest first half start since 2011. There was good news from the consumer, but businesses were cautious during the April – June period. They trimmed inventories and cut back on investment, amid uncertainty (particularly overseas) and a strong US dollar.

Deutsche Bank Chief US Economist Joe LaVorgna—responding specifically to the GDP report—certainly wasn't excited. "The economy remains vulnerable to downside risks. The Fed is right to be cautious." But looking at more recent activity, the strategists at JP Morgan set a considerably more optimistic tone. They expect the inventory drag to fade in the Third Quarter, and see upward pressure on wages due to job growth on track for 150m – 200m per month. Morgan expects a 2–2.5% growth pace for the rest of this year and 2017. Not great ... but not bad, and most likely good enough to support higher US equity prices.

Profits have been continuing a pattern. According to Bloomberg Gadfly's Michael Regan two-thirds to three-quarters of companies have been beating expectations for a while now. Keep in mind profits expectations have been quite conservative, so this makes sense. This particular earnings season started out even better, with the first 18 Dow companies beating estimates and the S&P 500 companies reporting by July 26th beating by an average of 5.4%. However, energy companies were not part of that early review, and some of those have been awful. Exxon Mobil and Chevron reported bad misses on Friday 7/29 as the American energy sector reels due to low oil prices.

Overall, though, the pattern of beating (low) earnings expectations is still intact. This has supported the market.

Quick look at valuations

As far as valuations are concerned, for a market at or near its all-time high they're not out-of-line. Often, when the market is this high, it's pricey relative to expected earnings. The forward P/E ratio is now at 17.5 times, not that much higher than the 25-year average of 15.9x. Stocks continue to look cheap relative to lower-risk fixed income products.

JP Morgan's Chief Global Strategist Dr. David Kelly provides an upbeat outlook for equity investors. "The numbers don't lie. The reality is that the investment environment is healthy today and much better than it has been over most recent decades. For long-term investors, logic has always proven to be a better friend than emotion and logic still suggests this is still a good time to be invested in risk assets," said Kelly.

That brings us to the Fed

It appears to us (and many other economists) that the downside risks to the US economy have diminished. That said, the doves at the Fed won't be able to hold out too long. But while the members may agree on standards for the next hike, what the numbers actually say relative to those guidelines is subjective and open to interpretation.

While it seems like progress continues toward the Fed's dual mandate of maximum employment and 2% inflation, the doves read the data more cautiously. They may be able to persuade the hawks to hold on for a few more months with help from two outside considerations. First, if the US raises rates sooner rather than later, we will be an outlier in the world community (i.e. we will be tightening while central banks like the Bank of Japan and the European Central Bank are cutting). Second, who could forget there's an election coming up in November? The Fed may want to sit on the sidelines until that passes.

Right now, we believe it is possible for a one-quarter point hike in September. But in our view it is more likely to come after the election. There is no real urgency—the Fed may not want to upset the apple cart. But even if there is a token move at the September meeting, it really shouldn't upset the markets much.

Venturesome investors should act

With June jobs rebounding strongly, a resilient consumer, and continued low interest rates, we are advising Venturesome investors to increase the domestic stock fund allocation by 10%. The funds for this purchase should come from the Bond Fund allocation. Specifically, for the MONEYLETTER Venturesome model, you should Sell DoubleLine Total Return Bond N (ticker: DLTNX) and Buy William Blair Small Cap Small Cap Growth N (WBSNX). For the Fidelity Venturesome model, you should Sell Fidelity Mortgage Securities (FMSFX) and Buy Fidelity Small Cap Discovery (FSCRX). And for the Vanguard Venturesome model, you should Sell Vanguard Mortgage-Backed Securities (VMBS) and Buy Vanguard Small Cap Value ETF (VBR).

There is no change for Conservative and Moderate subscribers.

For a final boost of confidence, we go back to Gavyn Davies. "If this improvement continues it might suggest that the global economy is achieving 'escape velocity,' in which the recovery becomes self-propelled, without needing repeated doses of monetary and fiscal policy support to prevent a renewed slowdown," said Davies in the Financial Times of London.

You should keep (or add to) your equity fund positions, depending on your risk tolerance and time horizon. Stocks funds are the best choice on a risk-reward basis. $

No Cost Alternative?

QI follow your Select ETF model in MONEYLETTER Plus. You recently recommended Alerian MLP ETF (AMLP). Is there another similar product without the $7 transaction fee at most brokerages? Buying one or two shares at a time, it makes no sense to purchase it this way. Vanguard has Vanguard Energy ETF (VDE), but no MLPs. Anything available without a fee at Vanguard or Scottrade?

— M.P., Urbana, OH

AIt looks like you have substituted Vanguard ETFs for the model choices (i.e. VNQ instead of SCHH, VOX for IYZ, VYM for PEY, and VPU for XLU). Keep in mind that fund selection for the Select ETF model is a “technical” choice, and not by “sector.” While AMLP is correlated to energy, MLPs (master limited partnerships) tend to behave a bit differently. That said—and since you indicate that you’re buying smaller amounts for periodic investment—based on current rankings options includes VDE and VDC (Vanguard Consumer Staples ETF).

If you haven’t seen MONEYLETTER Plus in a while, visit: www.moneyletter.com/MLP16Jan08SAMPLE.pdf to check out a sample copy.

QVanguard High Dividend Yield Index Investor (VHDYX) and Vanguard High Dividend Yield ETF (VYM) are essentially the same fund. One is a traditional mutual fund and one is an ETF. Why are their returns different? Also, why is SPDR S&P Dividend ETF (SDY) not shown in the July issue? I recently signed up for your newsletter, please advise.

— S.M., Beaver, PA

ARegarding VHDYX and VYM, their returns should be virtually the same. Upon further inspection, it appears our pricing service missed a dividend payout in June for the traditional mutual fund. Additionally, there is a small expense ratio difference, .07% in favor of the ETF. Regarding SDY, the fund was not in our database. We are adding it with the current issue.

Fine-Tuning Our Domestic Stock Fund List

We are always looking to deepen the MONEYLETTER lists of funds, and we recently added a dividend-focused ETF, SPDR S&P Dividend. Meanwhile, while we often highlight new Buy recommendations from the top of MONEYLETTER's fund rankings, here we explain why we are not recommending the purchase of the current top-rated fund, Aegis Value.

Aegis Value (AVALX)

Scott Barbee, founder and portfolio manager of Aegis Value, started the fund in 1998 to focus on small-cap, deep value stocks. Barbee notes that he and his firm have a contrarian nature, which dovetails with the deep value approach.

His process starts with a “quantitative overlay, screening for companies trading at discounts to tangible book value. We also tend to look for less levered situations. Additionally, we look for either current cash flow, or evidence of better future cash flow. Corporate share repurchases, insider share repurchases, restructurings, and other potentially impactful corporate events also factor into our selection process,” he told ValueWalk.com in 2010. They also look for undervalued or hidden assets, as well as liabilities, and tend to stress cash flows over earnings.

A look at the portfolio shows a predominance of micro-cap stocks, nearly three-quarters of assets, with the remainder small caps. And given its deep value focus, sector weightings generally differ widely from the benchmark Russell 2000 Value Index. The fund is significantly overweight in basic materials stocks, which account for 39% of assets. It is also overweight the energy and consumer defensive sectors, and notably underweight in financials, industrials, and health care. The fund is also concentrated with regard to individual holdings: There are 54 stocks total, with 53% of assets in the top ten.

Sitting at the top of the holdings list is Alliance One International at more than 10% of assets. It has advanced 51% this year through the end of July. This tobacco leaf processor had been under selling pressure due to accounting irregularities related to closure of a Kenyan operation. Barbee held through the uncertainty and the fund is now benefitting. Other big contributors to results have been its stable of precious metals mining stocks (22% of assets at the end of the first quarter). Note that the Morningstar Equity Precious Metals fund category has advanced 114.6% this year, far outpacing all other categories.

With a year-to-date return of 55.5%, and the number one rank in the MONEYLETTER list, why is the fund rated Hold? The simple answer is volatility. For example, the fund swung from a -51.4% loss in 2008 to a 91.4% gain in 2009.

Similarly, it was at the bottom of its category in 2014 and 2015 (due in part to early investment in precious metals mining stocks) but is now at the top of its category. Volatility and hefty portfolio concentrations prevent the “Buy.”

SPDR S&P Dividend (SDY)

Dividend focused funds have rated highly of late, and we are adding SPDR S&P Dividend to broaden the number of these funds in our list. This ETF tracks the S&P High Yield Dividend Aristocrats Index, which selects stocks from the S&P Composite 1500 that have increased dividends for at least 20 consecutive years, and also meet certain liquidity and market capitalization requirements. Stocks that meet the criteria are weighted by indicated annual yield, but capped at 4% of the index. The fund essentially holds the same portfolio as the index, which is rebalanced quarterly and reconstituted annually.

Compared to the Russell 1000 Value index, the fund is most overweight in materials, industrials, and utilities, and underweight in financial services and health care. About 45% of assets are in large stocks and 47% in the mid-range. The fund's 18.6% gain this year puts it in the top decile of Morningstar's large growth category. Many of its real estate holdings have been notably strong, along with some of its materials stocks.
